The Transformation of American Healthcare: A Time for Leaders

Healthcare has undergone profound change in the last decade, and that change continues. The Affordable Care Act has significantly expanded coverage through Medicaid and insurance exchanges, while payment reform has moved ahead with the increased shift from volume to value, the increased focus on accountable care and the proposed implementation of new payment models for physicians under Medicare.

At the same time, the healthcare marketplace is changing rapidly with increasing consolidation of the delivery system into ever-larger organized systems of care. Organizations and individuals need to be flexible to adjust to additional modifications in the reform agenda, especially following the presidential election including the possible push for further changes in coverage, reimbursement reform, the growth in transparency and accountability, and the relentless quest for value in healthcare.

This presentation will review the progress made and highlight the promise for future. In particular, the presentation will focus on the political, economic, and strategic context of change in healthcare, describe the possible scenarios we face and examine how the various actors are preparing for the future. It will identify the leadership challenges and opportunities that lie ahead and will provide strategic insights on how health systems can flourish in the future.

The overall goal of the presentation is to inform leaders on the “why of change” by defining the forces driving transformation in healthcare and to encourage and inspire leaders. At this critical time, healthcare leadership matters and makes a key difference in improving the health and health care of the communities we serve.
